

EXTERNAL CAVITY LASER WITH SELECTIVE THERMAL CONTROL

ABSTRACT

A laser apparatus wherein a gain medium and an optical output assembly are mounted on a common, thermally conductive substrate which provides selective thermal control of the gain medium and output components on the substrate while avoiding unnecessary thermal control of other laser components, and methods for selectively cooling a gain medium and output components of a laser apparatus.